

Approved dangerous goods training bodies

Drivers of all vehicles (irrespective of vehicle mass) carrying dangerous goods above the exempt quantity are required to undergo training by a training body approved by the Department of Transport. The issue of a "D" category professional driving permit is dependant on the production of a certificate issued by an approved training body within the previous six months.

Although a PrDP is valid for two years, training is to be carried out annually. The complete list of the gazetted "approved" training bodies has been consolidated and appears below, grouped by province and listed alphabetically. An italicised reference at the foot of each entry gives the Government Notice number (prefixed GN) and date of promulgation.

It should be emphasised that the approval process is far from infallible and that inclusion in this list by no means endorses the professionalism, competency or quality of training offered. Effort has been made to verify contact details, however, due to the COVID-19 lockdown, we cannot be certain of the validity of these details. Where details have been confirmed to be incorrect, they have been crossed out. New entries have been published as originally gazetted.

Diligence is advised when choosing a training provider.
