

Rules of the Road

The Know-the-Law Handbook

Equip yourself and your drivers with this valuable handbook and save thousands in invalid traffic fines

It is a known fact that many fines are invalid due to numerous technicalities such as infringement notices being served late, the infringement not being adequately described and traffic authorities not following correct official procedures not to mention the corruption of traffic officers.

This book not only puts the official regulations at your fingertips but helps you understand them and how to interpret them. Throughout the book, side-bars give additional information and tips regarding the law. Prosecution guidelines, that the authorities are legally obliged to follow are also included.

These concern speeding offences, traffic light violations, camera traps, driving under the influence, overloading and the issuing warrants of arrest and roadblocks.

Each book comes with a free AARTO CD containing the complete Administrative Adjudication of Road Traffic Offences Act and Amendments as well as the Regulations and printable forms.

To ensure a complete and accurate understanding, there is also a section listing and clarifying all the legal definitions of terms appearing in the National Road Traffic Act as well as the NRTA Regulations.

Finally, there is a section outlining the Administration of Road Traffic Offences Act and what it means to you, followed by a simplified list of offences and penalties appearing in the traffic cop's (AARTO) price list.

Get your money back

If you have already paid a fine which is invalid (perhaps because the infringement notice was not served within the required 40 days), the book even shows how to get your money back.
